CHURCH DECORATION

An old family firm of craftsmen established nearly 90 years and now in the third generation of the Campbell family, we have devoted ourselves to the specialized work of CHURCH DECORATION in all its aspects. Many hundreds of churches, large and small, ornate and simple, have been entrusted to our hands throughout the years so that our experience is now unrivalled. Each successive year sees an increase in the number of churches completed.

Our reputation lies in this solid achievement. A few of the famous churches recently redecorated are shown below.

THE CENTRAL CHURCH FUND

The Central Church Fund was created in 1915. It is the only capital fund in existence which is available to meet any urgent and unexpected needs of the Church of England of whatever kind, and whether at home or abroad, which are outside the scope of the Church Commissioners and the Church societies and for which provision has not been made through the Church Assembly Fund.

In recent years the Central Church Fund has borne:—

the entire cost of the work of the Central Board of Finance in connection with the Christian Stewardship Movement (except insofar as part has been recovered by the sale of publications);

the greater part of the cost of the creation of the central statistical registers and subsequent maintenance of the work of the Board's Statistical Unit;

the initial expenses connected with the establishment of the Church's Investment and Deposit Funds;

the initial cost of establishing the Church of England Radio and Television Council.

While the Central Board of Finance welcomes gifts for specified objects, it calls attention to the great advantage of unfettered gifts to this fund which can be applied, at the Board's discretion, to whatever objects may from time to time command the highest degrees of priority.

DONATIONS · SUBSCRIPTIONS LEGACIES are urgently needed

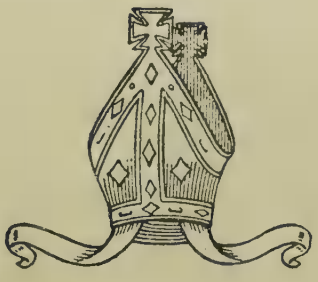
All contributions should be made payable to the Central Church Fund and sent to:

The Secretary, The Central Board of Finance (C.C.F.), Church House, Dean's Yard, Westminster, London, S.W. 1.

Covenanted subscriptions from companies and private individuals are especially welcome.



Forms of covenant for gross or net annual subscriptions and forms of banker's order will be supplied upon request.

SUGGESTED FORM OF BEQUEST FOR USE IN A WILL OR CODICIL

'I give and bequeath to the Central Board of Finance of the Church of England, whose registered office is at Church House, Dean's Yard, Westminster, London, S.W. 1, . . . per cent of the residue of my estate to be credited to the Central Church Fund and to be applied both as to capital and income to such ecclesiastical charitable purposes in the Church of England as the said Board shall in its absolute discretion decide, and I declare that the receipt of the Secretary for the time being of the said Board shall be a sufficient discharge to my executors for the same.'

NOTE. If it is preferred that an exact sum be named, then instead of the words which are printed above in bold italics, the amount of money in words and figures should be stated.

Old Stamps on Letters . . .

. . . may be valuable

While age alone does not necessarily render a stamp valuable, old correspondence may sometimes yield remarkable 'finds', as in the case of the rare stamps illustrated above. Issued by Hawaii in 1851, they were used, for the most part, on Missionaries' letters home.

The H. R. Harmer Organization, the world's leading philatelic auctioneers, have in the past sold many 'discoveries' for their fortunate finders, and are always ready to advise owners as to the best means of realizing highest prices for Collections and single rarities.

PARISH REGISTERS

(and other Parish Records)

are a priceless and irreplaceable possession, forming, as they do, the archives of a Parish.

Much invaluable work has been, and is, done by Societies and privately, to preserve by transcription the contents of such Records. Whilst every care may be taken of these documents, the possibility of accidental damage cannot be ruled out, and as long as the original Registers, &c. remain untranscribed, the danger that the information therein may be lost for ever cannot be over-emphasized.

What can be done to prevent such loss where no Transcript exists ?

An accurate Transcript of the entries in the Registers, comprehensively indexed, would be an adequate safeguard, and much valuable time could be saved when searching for names. Publication of Registers is not essential, and the Clergy will not be deprived of their Search Fees, for certified copies of entries are essential in order to prove a pedigree.

Reasonable charges. Personal service guaranteed.

Please send f'cap s.a.e. for leaflets—no obligation.

All types of Cataloguing and Indexing (Books, MSS., Collections, &c.) carried out, but the repair of documents, &c. CANNOT be undertaken.

The Scrolls and Christian Origins

The Rev. Professor M. BLACK DD FBA Have the Scrolls any light to shed on the origins of Christianity? This is the main problem which is investigated in this book. It is divided into two parts, historical and theological. The first examines the question of the origins and identity of the Qumran sect: the sect of the scrolls is the same as the ancient Jewish sect of the Essenes, and crystallized out of the older movement of the Hasidaeans of Maccabaean times. The second part discusses the religious institutions and theological conceptions of the scrolls, especially those which seem to possess some relationship or resemblance to Christian ideas or institutions. 16 half-tone plates 21s

PATERNALISM AND THE CHURCH

A. M. HOLLIS

From many years' experience in South India both before and since the inauguration of the Church of South India in 1947, Bishop Hollis writes of the 'mission pattern' which now is, or should be, a thing of the past, and asks pertinent questions about the emergence of a new pattern of church life which ought to be replacing the old. 9*s.* 6*d. net*

THE TRUE MISTERY OF THE PASSION

JAMES KIRKUP

A group of medieval townspeople produce a Passion play in which the mayor plays Pilate, the local carpenter makes the three crosses, and the whole audience is drawn into the action. Along with humour and naiveté the drama and majesty of Christ's suffering is vividly presented. This full text, of which a shorter version has been most successfully televised, repays reading, and gives material for acting versions at a producer's discretion. Paper covers 10*s.* 6*d. net*

A Service Book for Churches where Congregational singing is fostered

The English Hymnal Service Book contains not only over 300 widely useful hymns and carols drawn from The English Hymnal and other sources, but also the Canticles and the Psalter simply pointed, the Versicles and Responses at Mattins and Evensong set to familiar chants, Merbecke's setting of the Holy Communion, together with those parts of the Offices and the Communion which are said by all.

Both editions—the chancel and the pew—are alike in content, except that the latter does not contain the music of the hymns and carols. Congregations using this book will therefore be able to join with confidence in both the sung and said parts of the services.

The book also provides an extensive Subject Index and a helpful Table of Psalms for use at Holy Communion. It can conveniently be used in the same churches as The English Hymnal since the numbers of the hymns in the parent book are cross-referenced in the service book.

Churches are invited to write to the Publishers for inspection copies and for details of a generous grant scheme.

In over 80 ports all over the world Chaplains and Lay Workers of The Missions to Seamen offer Christian worship, instruction, and fellowship to seamen of all races and many nations.

Everything possible is done to enable Churchmen at sea to continue the duties and privileges of Church membership and to link them with the Church at home.

Clergy and relatives of seafarers are invited to send particulars of seamen and name of ship so that they may be commended to and welcomed by our port Chaplains.

GIRLS' FRIENDLY SOCIETY and TOWNSEND MEMBERS' FELLOWSHIP

A society of the Church for girls and women

The purpose of the Society is to give glory to God by bringing girls and women into the full life and fellowship of the Church and by helping them to know, love, and serve our Lord Jesus Christ. Branches are usually run on a parochial basis and it is intended that they should form part of the life of the parish. They may only be formed with the approval of the incumbent. Leaders are communicant members and the teaching given is that of the Church. The programmes cover a wide range of activities suitable to the age of the members. Hostels and holiday houses are run in many parts of the country. The Townsend Club, Greycoat Place, London, S.W. 1, provides an attractive and congenial meeting place for girls between 16 and 21 working in and around London.

Attacks on the Christian Faith are subtle, yet numerous. The present state of the world calls for an active presentation of the Gospel message.

Removing difficulties, correcting doubts, refuting the many untruths which are circulated in Press and Public Parks, needs the treatment of specialists.

The Christian Evidence Society was founded for this purpose

Literature and witness combined with a reasonable statement of the claims of the Church of Jesus Christ, through the agency of Clergy and Laity, must be an active part of the Church's message.

CHURCH FUNDS

Do you find that parishioners are reluctant to enter into seven-year deeds of covenant with your parish church in case they move away within that time?

If you recommend to them THE CHARITIES AID FUND OF THE NATIONAL COUNCIL OF SOCIAL SERVICE, then your church can obtain the benefits of refunded tax that are obtained under deeds of covenant, and the parishioners do not have to commit themselves to you for seven years.

A single covenant with the Charities Aid Fund, for not less than £10, will enable the donor to decide each year which church or charity shall receive his gifts. Your church receives the advantage of tax rebate and this applies equally to special appeals.

The only charity which for over 100 years has existed solely for the relief of aged farmers or their women dependants who have been ruined in the practice of their industry. On the conclusion of its Centenary the R.A.B.I. had distributed over 2 million pounds in small pensions to more than 9,000 farmers and their women dependants who suffered loss of health and wealth in their efforts to maintain the productivity of the land on which our national security and well-being so largely depend. Today, the R.A.B.I. is supporting over 1,000 of them.

His Grace the Archbishop of Canterbury writes:

PREFACE

Archiepiscopal and episcopal changes

IN our last issue we wrote of the probability that before the next General Election the Archbishop of Canterbury and the Bishops of London and Winchester would have resigned. Given their age, and the declared intentions of some of them, this required no great degree of prescience. We had hardly expected, however, that the occupants of four of the five senior sees of England would change within a space of less than twelve months. This, however, has happened, and we must put on record here that on 17 January 1961, the Most Reverend Geoffrey Francis Fisher announced his resignation of the See of Canterbury which he had held since 1945, that within three days the appointment was announced of the Most Reverend Arthur Michael Ramsey, Archbishop of York, as his successor, and of the Right Reverend Frederick Donald Coggan, Bishop of Bradford, as Archbishop of York. Within a few weeks the resignations of the Right Reverend Henry Colville Montgomery-Campbell, Bishop of London, and of the Right Reverend Alwyn Terrell Petre Williams, Bishop of Winchester, followed, and in the course of the summer the Right Reverend Robert Wright Stopford, Bishop of Peterborough, and the Right Reverend Sherard Falkner Allison, Bishop of Chelmsford, were appointed to succeed them. In the same year, 1961, the Bishop of Hereford also resigned and has been succeeded by the Right Reverend Mark Allin Hodson, Bishop Suffragan of Taunton. Dr. Coggan's place at Bradford has been filled by the appointment of the Right Reverend Clement George St. Michael Parker, Bishop Suffragan of Aston, and that of Dr. Allison by the appointment of the Very Reverend John Gerhard Tiarks, Provost of Bradford. Before these changes and since the publication of our last issue there had already been announced the appointments of the Right Reverend Charles Robert Claxton, Bishop Suffragan of Warrington, to Blackburn, the Right Reverend Edward Barry Henderson, Bishop Suffragan of Tewkesbury, to Bath and Wells, the Reverend Richard David Say to Rochester, and the Very Reverend George Edmund Reindorp, Provost of Southwark, to Guildford. It will be observed that these eleven appointments have produced only three episcopal consecrations, all the rest being translations. On this subject we refer our readers to what was said in our last Preface.

The new Archbishops

The appointment of the two new Archbishops has been almost universally welcomed and we may be thankful that the Prime Minister had the knowledge of the Church and the strength of mind needed to resist firmly the propaganda that was being carried on in some influential but unrepresentative quarters against the possible nomination of Dr. Ramsey to Canterbury. The choice of Dr. Coggan for York means that both the Archbishops of the Church of England are now men whose training is primarily that of a theologian but who have also shown real understanding of the present situation of the Church and real care for the right and effective undertaking of its pastoral and evangelistic work. We can be satisfied that under them the Church will be both safe and adventurous, that first things will be put first, and that expediency will be properly subordinated to principle.

Their task

It is inevitable that with the beginning of two new primacies thoughts should turn to the general situation of the Church and to what lies ahead. In our last issue we wrote of two principal tasks—reform and evangelism. It is too early to discern fully the thoughts of the Archbishops on these subjects, but some things are clear. There is a welcome determination to hasten the work of Canon Law Revision and carry it to a conclusion with the greatest possible speed. There are understandable reasons for the slowness of progress hitherto (and not least the wholly inadequate provision for a proper secretariat for the Convocations) but it has become something of a scandal that the same subjects should recur so frequently and that the impression should be given that the Church is wholly absorbed in overhauling its own machinery. We may be thankful that the Archbishop of Canterbury has tried to direct attention rather to that part of Canon Law Revision which is intended to make it easier for the Church to reform its worship and to recover liturgical order.

This concentration upon the worship which is so central to the Christian life is typical of Dr. Ramsey. In the sermon at his enthronement, and still more in his brief television talk about prayer, he has made the impression of being a deeply spiritual man. To those who know him this will have come as no surprise, but it is of the highest importance that this should be the impression made by the Archbishop of Canterbury upon the general public. As we said in our last Preface, the Archbishop is the popular 'image' of the Church of England, and people's attitude to the Church will depend very much upon what they think of the Archbishop. Those who heard his talk on prayer, delivered at one of the peak viewing periods of the week, can have had no doubt that here is a man of great kindness, sympathy, and spirituality, a man of God who understands the anxieties of ordinary people and can speak in simple straightforward terms about them and about the things of God. If this brief experience sets the tone of Dr. Ramsey's primacy, churchpeople may be filled with encouragement and expectation.

Lord Fisher of Lambeth

This is not the time at which to attempt an estimate of Archbishop Fisher's work, and we would wish to make clear that nothing that has been written above is in any way intended as a reflection upon him. We believe that the leading article in The Times on the morning after the announcement of his resignation justly expressed something of what the Church owes to him, and there is no question that the good wishes and gratitude of churchpeople, and of many outside the Church, go with him to his retirement. The position of one who has retired from the Archbishopric of Canterbury cannot be easy. There are only two precedents, namely Archbishops Davidson and Lang, who were both older and physically weaker than Lord Fisher, as well as being men of more cautious nature. We can well understand that for one who has for so long and so valiantly borne the heavy burden of leadership in the Church, and has been accustomed to speak his mind so freely on matters of current controversy, it is hard to step aside and to remain silent upon the problems which have so greatly occupied him. There is, however, a wise and charitable tradition in English public life that one who has retired from high office should observe the greatest discretion and should scrupulously avoid becoming in any way an embarrassment to his successor, a tradition markedly observed by Sir Winston Churchill. We believe this tradition to be in the best interests of the Church as well as to be good in secular life.

His visit to the Pope

Having said that, we hasten to turn to some of the greatest things that Lord Fisher has done. In our last Preface we wrote that Anglicans should be quick to respond to the geniality of the new Pope, but we had hardly expected that the response would come as it did from the Archbishop of Canterbury. It is plain that both Pope John and Lord Fisher have in common a real lovableness which drew them together, but we should not underestimate the courage required in Lord Fisher to make his decision to visit the Pope. An estrangement of more than three centuries is not lightly broken, and, as an unfortunate debate in the House of Lords showed, there was bound to be deep suspicion and opposition from prominent people in England. But the decision was taken and amply rewarded. It is true that, as Lord Fisher has himself said, too much must not be built upon a courtesy call, but acts of courtesy are among the most important and influential things in human relationships, and this one has without doubt marked the beginning of a new era in the relationship not only of Canterbury and Rome but, it may be also, of Rome and the whole non-Roman West. The importance and the originality of this, Lord Fisher's last official contribution to the subject of church relations, must not be allowed to obscure his Cambridge Sermon of 1946 and the discussion with the Free Churches which followed from it. At the moment relations with the Church of Scotland have run into difficulties through the Scottish rejection of the negotiators' proposals. It appears that conversations are to be resumed, but the prospect of reaching any sort of agreement in the near future seems remote. Little has been said about the conversations with the Methodists since the publication of the Interim Report in 1958, but the reception given to that Report on the Methodist side was not hopeful. It may, in fact, be long before any basis of union acceptable to both Anglicans and Free Churchmen is worked out, but when such union is reached, as we must believe that it will be in time, grateful remembrance should be made of the tireless efforts and encouragement given by Lord Fisher.

The Scheme of Church Union in Ceylon

At the time of writing many churchmen are depressed by the decisions of the Convocations in respect of the Lanka Scheme of Union, and it may appear that the whole progress of relations with the Free Churches has received a set-back. We do not think that that is a right view of the situation. This was the first time that the English Convocations had been faced with a scheme which involved the unification of ministries by a single rite at the outset of union, something which was, as everyone agreed, wholly new. What is clear is that the Lower Houses of the Convocations, or at least the Lower House of Canterbury, were able to give a good deal more time to the examination of this scheme than was the Lambeth Conference, and that they had available to them more theological advice than was available to the Lambeth Conference, including the direct participation of theologians in the debates. There has been more than once the suggestion that because the Lambeth Conference decided in a particular way the Convocations should simply have followed its lead. This seems to us to make nonsense of any reference to the separate provinces of the Anglican Communion at all. The moral is rather that the Lambeth Conference as at present constituted and organized is not a satisfactory body for dealing with important and complicated theological issues. But essentially all that has happened is that the first attempt at producing a unification rite has not proved satisfactory. This may mean either that, as Bishop Newbiggin and others believe, the South India way of proceeding is the right one, or that some more satisfactory rite of unification should be worked out, or that some third way of union hitherto untried should be explored. There is a disposition to treat unity as of such high importance that it takes precedence of all other considerations, and to assume that any movement towards unity must be inspired by the Holy Spirit. We believe this to be far from self-evident. The claims of unity have to be balanced against the claims of truth and when that is done the latter must surely prevail. If we all seek the truth without prejudice and without passion, and above all without trying to win victories over one another, we must believe that the Lord of truth will in the end make us one.

On this subject of reunion we take leave to recall some words which we wrote in our Preface to the 1923 edition of Crockford, at a time when the Appeal of the 1920 Lambeth Conference was bearing fruit in discussions with Free Church leaders in England. At that time we said:

> We are inclined to think that a good deal of the discussion of the Christian Ministry which has taken place since the last Lambeth Conference, has begun, as it were, at the wrong end: that is to say—with the Bishop instead of with the Presbyter. Speaking broadly there are two questions which arise (a) By what means ought men to be ordained? (b) In what light ought ordained men to be regarded? And (b) is the more important of the two. It really determines our conception of what the whole Church either is or ought to be. If general agreement with regard to it could be reached it is probable that (a) would present very little further difficulty.

Nearly forty years later these sentences are still applicable to discussions about reunion. That unhappy phrase 'the historic episcopate' has bedevilled the whole field of thought about the Christian Ministry as far as Anglicans are concerned, and it may be said that among Free Churchmen the phrase 'the priesthood of all believers', though coming closer to the heart of the matter, has also stood in the way of an adequate consideration of the question 'In what light ought ordained men to be regarded?' The debates about the Ceylon Scheme will have done good if attention is now directed to this very important point of the nature of the Christian Ministry.

Theology and current controversy

At the present time there is a real danger that impatience will cause theology to be thrown to the winds. It should not pass unnoticed that some who should know better are prepared to appeal to ignorance and the emotions in an attempt to win victory for their point of view. It is very right and proper that the scandal of disunity should be brought home to ordinary Christian people and that they should be made to think about these problems, but they must be made to understand the difficulties and the serious theological issues that lie in the way of greater unity. There is in some quarters a disposition to follow the example of those church leaders of the fourth and fifth centuries who tried to overawe the councils by the threats of a rabble of ignorant monks and layfolk. When we find a professional theologian writing to the public press to say that those who oppose his views on open communion are moved by emotion rather than by rational thought we may begin to wonder what importance some teachers of theology attach to their subject. Of course, we all know that many so-called 'non-theological factors' are involved in our disunity, but we shall build on very insecure foundations if we reject theology. The exultant cry 'The bishops have triumphed over the theologians' was raised in a situation which most Anglicans would be loath to see created in our Church, where we have prided ourselves on our appeal to sound learning.

A new Doctrine Commission?

The Dean of St. Paul's, who cannot be accused of being a conservative, has called for the appointment of a new Doctrine Commission. There is, we believe, a real need for something of this sort, and we ourselves made a similar proposal in our 1957–58 Preface, though with somewhat narrower terms of reference than the Dean apparently has in mind. There is at present a large divorce between academic theology and the theological problems which face the Church today in many fields, but particularly in the field of reunion. There are teachers of theology who have been so strongly repelled by the shallowness of much ecclesiastical controversy that they give the impression of deliberately avoiding subjects which might bring them into this field. To do that is, however, to betray the vocation of a Christian theologian, and we cannot believe that there are many who would fail to respond to an appeal from the Archbishops to serve on a Commission such as the Dean has proposed, provided that they were assured of time for a thorough examination and discussion of the subject. It would be a great thing, and would do much to ensure the success of the Commission, if the two Archbishops were able to sit with it themselves. There is no reason in the nature of things why they should not, other than the purely formal one that the Report would eventually be presented to them. Having two distinguished theologians in the primatial chairs it would seem folly to exclude them from contributing to discussions of such importance. The Dean's proposal has been more particularly connected with a suggestion for the revision of the Thirty-nine Articles of Religion, but about that we are more doubtful. To touch this venerable document would certainly arouse party passion. A mild and sensible proposal by the Lower House of the Canterbury Convocation that new incumbents should no longer be required to read the Articles to reluctant congregations was withdrawn because of the controversy that it would arouse in certain quarters. Moreover we believe that to constrain a Doctrinal Commission by the requirement that it should revise a sixteenth-century document would be unreasonable. The era of the formulation of such things is passed and few theologians today would wish to see the Church tied to a newly constructed set of theses. The Articles should be allowed to retain their position as an interesting monument of our history. Few, if any, clerks can subscribe to them ex animo today and happily, since 1866, they have been relieved of the obligation to do so. At some future date it may be possible to remove even the present requirement of a general assent and so relieve the consciences of the clergy still further. At present there is little chance of any such proposal being considered. To revise the Articles is impracticable and undesirable, but it would be a service to the Church if a new Doctrine Report could be produced.

The former Doctrine Report came out at an unlucky moment, namely in 1938. Within eighteen months of its publication the outbreak of war disrupted the life of both Church and State, and it could reasonably be claimed that the Report has never received a fair examination by theologians. It must be obvious that any such document will date, but we wonder whether some of those who write disparagingly of it have really studied it. Some parts of the Report have proved their value by the extent to which they have been quoted elsewhere, as, for example, the section on episcopacy, and we believe that the whole Report could with advantage be re-examined. Theological study, like other intellectual discipline, has changed in the last twenty-three years, particularly in the fields of Old and New Testament criticism. New ideas proliferate and some of them are popularized by young scholars who at times give the impression that any theological writing earlier than 1950 is hardly worth consideration. On the whole the clergy are less well grounded in theology than they were two or three generations back, and there is a real danger of new views being taken up and applied by men who only partially understand them but who think that only the new is good. One scholar writes a book on, say, New Testament Theology, and this is apt to be widely used by students as representing the consensus of scholarly opinion, and the doctrine which overthrows all previous views. It would be a valuable corrective to the deracinated students and clergy of this generation if a large and representative group of scholars could produce as balanced a document as was the Doctrine Report.

The failure of the new C.A.C.T.M.

In our last Preface we expressed our misgivings about the reorganization of C.A.C.T.M. As we foresaw, the care for the selection and training of the clergy has suffered by reason of the subordination of the old C.A.C.T.M., now called the Ordination Candidates Committee, to the new monster of bureaucracy. This became evident in the proposal to build at great expense, and heavily endow, a large new Theological College. The proposal was very imperfectly thought out, enveloped, as Dr. Ramsey said, in a lot of high falutin' jargon, and produced after very inadequate consultation with those who are at present responsible for the theological teaching of the majority of ordinands in the Universities and at Theological Colleges. Subsequent discussion seems to have done something to correct these weaknesses, and at the time of writing we understand that the scheme is to re-emerge in an altered and more acceptable form. It is quite clear that one of the major causes of this lamentable incident has been the change in the constitution of C.A.C.T.M. This is one of the most serious problems of the moment and much of the right training of the clergy depends upon it. We believe that the weaknesses of the present system have been brought to the notice of the Archbishops and we are confident that their own experience as teachers of theology will help them to find the right way out of this difficulty. We were interested to read of a discussion in the House of Clergy of the Church Assembly about the training of the clergy. At first sight the motion which was passed might appear to cast reflections on the existing Theological Colleges, but we understand that this was not the intention of its mover; rather he wished to commend the Colleges for what they are already doing but sought to draw the attention of the Church to current problems in the training of ordinands. We were glad to find that our own comments on the disappearance of Morals from the syllabus of the General Ordination Examination were endorsed by this speaker as they have been by other eminent persons in the Church. It is to be hoped that if C.A.C.T.M. is reformed, serious consideration will be given to this matter.

The future of the Theological Colleges

We have sympathy with those who, like the mover of the Church Assembly motion, wish to see Theological Colleges brought into closer proximity to Universities. It is now many years since this was suggested by a Commission whose Report has joined so many others in the pigeon-holes of Church House. There is no doubt room for improvement even in respect of those Colleges which are already in university towns, but they are ideally situated compared with many of the country colleges where the problem of finding a staff academically well qualified is already difficult and will become more so as more academic posts for theologians are created in the Universities. There is much to be said for moving some, at any rate, of the existing country colleges to new sites rather than spending vast sums on perpetuating their present isolation. On the other hand, the arguments of those who stress the need for a time of greater quiet and concentration upon the spiritual life than is possible in a busy town and University deserve consideration. One reconciliation of the two points of view has been found in the union between King's College, London, and St. Boniface College, Warminster, which we believe has worked satisfactorily, and has provided those who have been through the intellectual discipline of London University and King's College with the opportunity of a year's quiet concentration on matters which do not fall within the normal University course. We believe that this kind of arrangement might with advantage be extended to other Colleges and Universities. But almost all reform in theological training depends upon an extension of what is now the customary length for an ordinand's course. We realize that financial questions are involved here, but they are not insuperable. If C.A.C.T.M. can contemplate vast capital expenditure on a new college, it could surely face the problem of raising the money needed to give every ordinand an extra year's training. Of all the major Christian bodies the Church of England probably requires less than most in the way of preparation for ordination. Few things would do more to improve the standard of the clergy and their equipment for their work than an extra year at their theological college. We believe that it is already apparent how much the Church has suffered from the attempts to meet the shortage of clergy by accepting men for ordination after very brief courses. It would be unreasonable to require the older candidate to go through exactly the same training as the undergraduate or young graduate, but we ourselves have seen only too clear evidence of the inadequacies of men accepted in middle age and sent to some small private establishment where they have apparently learned neither the doctrine nor the discipline of the Church of England.

The Southwark night school

By this criticism we do not mean to cast any reflection upon the interesting experiment of a night school for ordinands now being made by the authorities of the Southwark diocese. From what we have heard it is obvious that this new venture has touched a section of the population in secular employment who could not afford to abandon their work for the period of testing needed to determine the reality of a vocation, and it may well prove a means of bringing new classes of ordinands to the Church. We may perhaps be allowed to express the hope that the theological training given will be of a broad kind, representative of traditional Anglicanism as well as of more recent ideas, and that the recipients of it will, before ordination, have a lengthy period of time for spiritual preparation.

Importance of spiritual training

We have detected in some quarters a tendency to disparage the spiritual training given in our theological colleges, on the grounds that the time-table observed and the books recommended for study do not correspond in the least with the realities of modern life. We recognize freely that there is here a real problem. A spirituality for the second half of the twentieth century has yet to be developed, but this will most probably be done by men who are versed in the classical spiritualities of the Christian Church, not by those who have firmly turned their backs upon all that has been written just because it belongs to ages different from our own. It is no condemnation of the permanent value of The Cloud of Unknowing to say that it was written in the fourteenth century. A man trained in the discipline of that book will be much better fitted to face the problems of today than many a one trained in what passes for current Biblical or liturgical piety.

Priest-workmen

Much is heard nowadays about new ways with the ministry. In our issue of 1957–58 we wrote of proposals for a part-time priesthood, and referred to the depressing nature of the evidence about 'priest-workmen'. We are glad to record that since then further experiments of a much more encouraging kind have been made in this direction and that there are now several young men in different parts of the country and under varying circumstances who are combining the priesthood with full-time manual work. They believe that they have a particular vocation to this kind of exercise of the ministry, and we may be thankful that today there are bishops wise enough to let them try, and, we hope, to give them guidance. We are aware that some at least of these young men are married. The Church should not forget that the vocation of a 'priest-workman' is one that must be shared by his family if he has one, and that the sacrifices involved for them may well be greater than anything required of the priest himself. There has been some ill-informed comment on the wages paid to these men, and comparison has been made between what they receive as factory workers and what they would have received as curates. Such talk is as ungenerous as it is unjustified. It fails to take account of such things as the cost of buying or renting a house, the fixed hours of work, shortness of holidays, and other factors which make the two kinds of life radically different. What remains to be seen, and what time alone can show, is how long it will be right for priests to remain in this kind of employment. Is the vocation to manual work lifelong, and if it is not may there not be a serious weakening of the witness that it bears? Here again the question of a family is relevant, for the decision must be faced whether to commit one's children to a particular kind of life and social milieu. These are not questions to be easily answered, and there are others like them which will arise. The young men who are making these experiments deserve the prayers and sympathy of the whole Church, for it is probable that much depends on them, not only in respect of recovery of contact with the artisan classes, but also in respect of how it is possible to use the priesthood in other than traditional ways.

The parson's freehold

Whatever may be the success of these or of other experiments with the ministry it is certain that for long the parish and the parish priest will remain the central feature in the organized life of the Church of England, but the development of more and more types of non-parochial ministry will make sharper the contrast between the security of the parish priest and the mobility of other sections of the ministry. This is to raise the old question of the parson's freehold. We are well aware of the arguments advanced in support of this venerable institution, and we recognize the validity, both historical and contemporary, of many of them, but we believe that there is among the laity a growing dissatisfaction with the present system and that the present degree of immunity enjoyed by the beneficed clergy is good neither for them nor for the Church. That is not to say that we would wish to see the freehold swept away, but we do believe that it should be modified and that it is not beyond the wit of man to devise a scheme that will both preserve the independence of the clergy and meet the complaints justly levelled at the present system. We do not believe that the freehold in its present form can long survive and we would urge the clergy to take steps themselves to see how it can be reformed. It will be much better for the Church if the initiative comes from the clergy themselves rather than if changes are forced upon them after long controversy. We cannot believe it to be right, or consistent with the well-being of a Christian community, that a priest should be able to come to a parish, turn everything upside down, and that the laity should have no redress. Nor can we believe it to be right that a man should be allowed to remain in a parish when he is obviously no longer able to give the spiritual leadership and care that it needs. We have reason to think that many of the younger clergy are aware of these problems and face them with less prejudice than their elders.

Crown appointments

One of the arguments usually advanced for the retention of the freehold is the need to secure the parish priest against episcopal autocracy and one-sidedness. With our present bishops this need is perhaps less evident, at least in many dioceses, than it was a generation or two ago, but as long as the present method of appointment of bishops remains there will be strong case for the freehold. This leads to a subject about which we wrote in 1956 and which within the last twelve months has been curiously brought to the public notice by the unfortunate affair of the Deanery of Guildford. Very few people are in a position to know the inner history of that affair and we have no desire to revive discussion of it, but it has led directly to the appointment of a Commission which is to review the general question of Crown nominations. It appears to be generally assumed that the Commission will not recommend any substantial change in the present system. If previous discussions are any guide we expect it to recommend (a) the removal of the penalties which now hang over the heads of those who fail to elect, confirm, or consecrate the Crown nominee, (b) to suggest changes in the form of the so-called election, (c) to recommend the establishment of some kind of advisory body which can suggest names to the Prime Minister on behalf of the Church as a whole and of the particular diocese. It is probable that if such recommendations are made with reasonable speed they will meet with little opposition. Whether they are a satisfactory solution to the problem is more doubtful.

There are three major criticisms of the present system. First, that it is unseemly, to use no stronger word, that men should be selected for the highest offices in the Church by someone who may not himself be a Christian, and should be imposed on the Church under threat of penalties. Part of this criticism would be met by the three changes listed above, but not all. It must be emphasized that real choice does lie with the Prime Minister. In a recent debate reference was made to an alleged statement by King George VI that it was he, not the Prime Minister, who chose the bishops, but we cannot believe it to be right constitutionally or practically that the Sovereign should have the responsibility of protecting the Church against unsuitable recommendation by the Prime Minister, any more than it would be right for the Sovereign to overrule the recommendations of the Home Secretary in respect of the exercise of the prerogative of mercy. That such things may have happened is, of course, an undeniable possibility, but it would be wrong to rest one's defence of the present system on them. The second major criticism is that a new bishop comes to his diocese unknown and uninvited. The late Bishop Furse, who had the experience of becoming a diocesan bishop under the electoral system in South Africa and under the system of Crown nomination here, writes very forcibly about the contrast, in his memoirs, and holds, as others have done, that the present method of appointing bishops accounts in part for the tension and lack of confidence between the parish clergy and the episcopate. The changes that we have mentioned might do something to weaken the force of this criticism. Everything would depend upon the extent of the influence allowed to representatives of the diocese concerned.

The third major criticism is one which we have seen little discussed. It is perhaps inevitable that any system of nomination by the Prime Minister must involve considerable participation by one or more civil servants. Somebody must collect the information on the basis of which the choice is made. One of the most distinguished of living churchmen has in fact defended the present arrangements on the ground that the Church is provided with a wonderful registry and clearing-house for information about the clergy at no expense to itself. We suggest that this may be a disadvantage. We certainly believe that the civil servants who collect information for the Prime Minister do their work with great care and conscientiousness but we believe that the task given to them is one of very great difficulty, and one which demands a knowledge of the Church and of personalities, both lay and clerical, in the Church, which can only come as the result of long experience. If it were the custom for the Patronage Secretary to grow up as a junior official under his predecessor's aegis his task would be easier, but recent practice seems to indicate that he may be selected from any branch of the civil service and pitch-forked into this delicate and difficult work with a minimum of preparation. A result is that when he collects information for a particular post he is himself very inadequately prepared to advise the Prime Minister about the relative weight to be attached to the various views that he has assembled. As regards the consideration of the name of any particular individual the existence of a file of information collected over a period of years is not wholly an asset. There will always be an inclination to play for safety, and an adverse comment made ten years earlier by some person of secular importance may have an altogether disproportionate weight, and, what is more, having been made privately cannot be corrected because it is unknown. We believe that under the present system far too much rests upon the intelligence and perceptiveness of one or two people, and we doubt whether any such changes as those that we have mentioned will meet this criticism. In the world of education it is assumed that headmasters and heads of colleges ought to be chosen by the governing bodies of their respective institutions; it ought not to be difficult to provide some comparable arrangement for the Church. There are many different forms of electoral system and there is now a substantial body of experience of them available. It ought to be possible to draw on this, and to devise a system free from the defects to which attention is so often drawn. We understand that at Oxford, as distinct from Cambridge, the appointment to certain professorships still rests with the Crown instead of being done by election, but we have not observed that these appointments are regarded as notably better.

The bishops and their background

In 1956 we made an attempt at some degree of analysis of the episcopate as it stood at 31 December 1955. The beginning of two new primacies affords an occasion for doing that again and for noting what changes if any have occurred in the last six years. During this period there have been twenty-eight changes, a startlingly high figure. It is still the case that most of the bishops have been educated at Oxford or Cambridge, but the proportions between these two Universities have been reversed. Oxford now has fifteen bishops and Cambridge twenty-four. Trinity College, Dublin, still has two, London one, and Manchester one. Fifteen of the present bishops took a first class in some part of their degree course, as compared with twenty, six years ago. The number of seconds has risen from ten to thirteen, the number of thirds from two to three; two bishops appear to have taken some form of unclassified honours, twelve have not supplied Crockford with any information about the nature of their degree other than that it was a B.A., and one does not appear to have proceeded to a degree at all. The number of bishops who spent a substantial part of their career as a parish priest has increased slightly, the number of ex-Principals of Theological Colleges has risen from four to eight, but the number of former university teachers has declined from ten to four. Sixteen of the present diocesans were suffragans at an earlier stage, and eleven held another diocese before being translated to the one over which they now preside.

The bishops and learning

Most of these changes are of no particular significance, but one does need comment, namely the decline in the number of professional scholars on the bench. This is to be measured not only in the degrees taken, but in subsequent contributions to scholarship. Of the present diocesans a sadly small company present evidence of this by published work. The explanation of this is not to be found only in current prejudice against academics, but also in the present nature of the episcopal office. We have written of this in previous issues and make no apology for returning to it again. The claims of diocesan administration today allow very little scope to men of the calibre of the great bishops of the late nineteenth and early twentieth centuries. This is partly a matter of the size of dioceses but not wholly so. The demands made upon episcopal time by organizations both central and diocesan is excessive and ought to be restricted. We believe that a proper system of synodical government in the diocese would both save the bishop's time and bring him into closer fellowship with his clergy, but it is impossible to persuade most bishops that this is so. It is significant that the one diocese in which synodical government really works is St. Albans, where it was introduced by Bishop Furse in the light of his South African experience and continued by Bishop Loyd who had also been a diocesan overseas.

Lambeth degrees

It was expected that Dr. Ramsey would wish to re-examine the recent practice in respect of the granting of Lambeth degrees. We discussed the history of these degrees in our Preface to the 1943 Supplement to Crockford.[1] At that time we said that though the Archbishop was competent to confer any degree, or at any rate any degree which can be conferred by Oxford or Cambridge, in practice he usually limited himself to Divinity and Music. Since then we have observed occasions on which degrees in Law and Arts have been conferred. There seems to be no very substantial reason why the degrees in Canon Law should not be revived if it is desired to encourage the study of that subject by lawyers, and also no reason why the Archbishop should not award the more modern degrees in Philosophy. Dr. Ramsey has announced his intention of bringing to an end the practice whereby a doctorate of divinity has been offered to diocesan bishops automatically on their appointment. We are not entirely convinced that this practice was wrong. It is still quite usual for Oxford and Cambridge colleges to make honorary fellows of their old members who became bishops, without implying the existence of any special academic attainments, and the award of what is clearly an honorary doctorate is not intended to signify more than that. It is perhaps a pity that the suffix jure dignitatis has dropped out of use, as it would have made the position crystal clear. The Archbishop's decision has, however, been made and generally welcomed. It remains to be seen how he will distinguish between honorary degrees and those that are awarded for academic merit. We venture to express the hope that the honorary degrees will be very few indeed. It would be most unfortunate if they became sufficiently frequent to encourage people in certain positions in the Church to expect and covet them.

The New English Bible

Remarkable publicity was given to the appearance of the first part of the New English Bible, and it is probable that there has not been in these islands so much Bible-reading for many generations. Even the translators themselves must have been surprised by the amount of interest which their work aroused. Sometimes this took a rather bizarre form, as in the activity of those groups of people who organized continuous public reading of the whole New Testament. Another bizarre feature of the occasion has been that some of the most adverse criticism of the new translation has come from avowed atheists and agnostics whose opposition appears to be based largely on the desire that the message of the Scriptures shall remain obscured by the language of the seventeenth century. It was inevitable that in many quarters the new translation should be lauded far above its merits, and it will need a longer period than has now elapsed before a just estimate of it can be made. The principal difficulty is to decide by what standard it should be judged and this in turn is connected with the use that it is desired to make of it, for a book which is helpful in private Bible-reading is not necessarily equally suitable for use in the liturgical services of the Church. Time alone will show whether the new translation can pass the test of regular public use.

In this respect a particular problem has been raised for the Church of England. It has been generally supposed that the expression 'The Authorized Version' implied that this and no other (except possibly the Revised Version) was the lawful text for use in the church services. Research into the origins of the Authorized Version suggests that this is not so. The position appears to be that for the Epistles and Gospels at the Holy Communion, and for the psalms at Mattins and Evensong and the other services of the Prayer Book, the version printed in that Book must be used, but that for the lessons at Mattins and Evensong any version may be used at the discretion of the minister, subject to the possibility of proceedings for heresy or misconduct if the translation selected is false or unseemly. This is a ludicrous situation. It means that legally the New English Bible cannot be used for the Epistles at Holy Communion, where on some Sundays it is most urgently needed, unless the Church applies to Parliament for authority to revise the Prayer Book in this respect, whereas at some of the most largely attended services an incumbent may use the New English Bible, Moffatt, Douai, Phillips, or Knox with impunity. In the work of liturgical revision which, we are told, will engage the Church for the next generation or so, this curious by-product of the Act of Uniformity should not pass unnoticed.

Liturgical revision

When we last wrote the proposals of the Liturgical Commission in respect of Baptism and Confirmation had recently been published and were beginning to be debated by the Convocations. It was to be expected that services so novel should meet with objection from the more conservative of churchmen, and that the proposals would need revision, but the violence of the reaction to them, at least in the Northern Province, does not hold out much hope for the future of liturgical revision and raises serious doubt whether anything substantial is likely to be achieved if the present draft canons on the subject remain unaltered. These canons require a two-thirds majority in each of the four houses of Convocation and in the House of Laity of the Church Assembly before any service can be authorized for general use during the experimental period of up to seven years. These majorities were suggested by the Moberly Commission on Church and State. The Report of that Commission has been severely criticized in a recent volume of Bampton Lectures and it may be regretted that the lecturer did not draw his hearers' attention to this specific point. At the moment the canons on lawful authority read as though they were designed to prevent rather than to facilitate revision of the Liturgy, and they reflect far too much the modern rigid legal interpretation of the Act of Uniformity. The year in which this Preface is published sees the third centenary of the passing of that Act. Three hundred years ago it was part of a settlement which defined the position of the Church of England after a century or so of changes. The least defensible part of this settlement was the principle of enforcing uniformity in public worship by State action, and it was one which has caused endless bitter strife in the Church. It would be a fitting commemoration of the settlement to which in the main the Church owes so much if this year could see a fresh approach to the subject of the control of public worship.

A glossy monster

In our last Preface we were able to make some use of a recently published booklet called Facts and Figures about the Church of England. This was a work of modest proportions and few who studied it can have had any expectation that it was to be followed three years later by a monster of statistics under the same title. Those who have been responsible for the new work must have expected criticism of their enterprise for they have prefaced it by a series of apologiae which range from a quotation from the Daily Telegraph to a series of short notes by the Bishop of Middleton which are printed under the high-sounding title of The Church and National Life, with the sub-title of The Contribution of Statistics and Sociological Studies to the Mission of the Church. We may expect that in another two or three years a third, and even larger, work will appear, for during 1961 vast sheets of inquiries were sent to all the non-parochial institutions which had been exempt from the earlier inquests. Many churchpeople will be repelled by this glossy monster and will have serious doubts about the propriety of the expenditure of so much time and labour in producing it. They will perhaps note that one of the few statistics that it apparently does not profess to record is the cost of its own production. The Bishop of Middleton evidently has some sympathy with the critics whose view, he writes, 'is not without point in an age of massive and superficial consumer-research', but he defends the action of the Central Board of Finance by arguing first that the Church, being an historical institution, is properly subject to historical and sociological analysis, and second, that 'the analysis of the Church and measurement of her relationship to the community by statistical and other modes of sociological study, provide us with positive means of advance'. The Bishop develops his points with some force and it may be conceded that few persons could have made a better case for this enterprise than he has done, but we should have been happier if he had drawn attention to some of the dangers which attend this whole operation.

Ecclesiastical bureaucracy and its perils

The Bishop writes that the figures and tables 'need careful use and interpretation, that in turn point to further studies we need and upon which policy and strategy might be based'. It is common knowledge that statistics can be used to serve many different purposes, and that their interpretation requires the application of principles and presuppositions about which the interpreters may differ. Who is to interpret these statistics, and, a still more pertinent question, who is to determine the basis of policy and strategy? We are brought back immediately to the old problem of centralization about which we have written so often in the past. With every year the bureaucracy at Westminster increases, and as it increases becomes more difficult for the Church Assembly to control. We are watching the rapid growth of a class of ecclesiastical administrators, certainly of the highest integrity, into whose hands the control of policy and strategy will surely fall. Some colour of general control by the Church is given through the election of members of the Church Assembly to the various Boards and Committees and Councils, but the work is expanding at such a rate and developing with such complexity that the idea of control by elected representatives is rapidly becoming the illusion that it already is in some other walks of life. Busy parish priests from the north of England, devoted laymen from industrial Liverpool or rural Herefordshire cannot afford the time for frequent visits to London to attend these bodies, and without constant attendance, as experience shows, effective control and wise control are impossible. There is an inevitability about the process that is frightening. Now, more than ever, the administrators and the administration need the prayers of the whole Church and the constant vigilance of those of the bishops and clergy and, it might be added, laymen, who are near enough to Westminster to exercise it.

The other great danger, already manifest, is one of which we would have expected the Bishop to show himself aware. It is concerned with the image that the Church presents to the world. The Church Commissioners certainly deserve the thanks of the whole Church, and particularly of the clergy, for the improvement of our finances, and it may well be that through their operations in the last ten years the prestige of the Church in the City of London and among members of the Stock Exchange has risen to remarkable heights, but we fear that this has been accompanied by presenting the Church to the country at large as a great and highly efficient business concern. In the past the Commissioners have suffered unjustly much opprobrium resulting from the mismanagement by other persons of the Paddington and similar estates. In their anxiety to recover their standing with the world at large they seem to have overlooked the fact that constant reference to their skill and success in handling investments is creating another image of the Church which in the end may be more fatal to its spiritual mission than was ever the so easily refuted accusation about the Paddington brothels. We fear that a growing concern with statistics and all that seems to be connected with them will only contribute to fix this new image more firmly in the public mind. What is most needed today is that the Church should be and should be seen to be a spiritual society. All the leadership for which we so hopefully look to Dr. Ramsey and Dr. Coggan will be of little effect unless the Westminster bureaucracy conducts itself with more modesty and discretion than it has done in the last few years.

Some statistics of interest

Some pages in the glossy monster give rise to a few random reflections. It would appear, for example, from the diagrams on pages 12 and 13 that the Church of England is still very largely a rural Church in that a markedly higher proportion of the population in rural areas, which, of course, form the largest part of the country, are practising churchpeople than is the case in the more thickly populated urban centres. One might easily conclude from this that the Church should put more effort into trying to provide each country parish with its own incumbent. Then it is interesting to note that in the last hundred years the highest figures for ordinations are for the decade 1882 to 1892 and that the next highest point to this peak period occurs round about the year 1910. Most readers of ecclesiastical biography and recent church history would agree that the half-century from 1864 to 1914 was one of the outstanding periods of English Church life in almost every respect. It was an age of great parish priests, of able and distinguished bishops, of missionary expansion overseas, of the foundation of theological colleges, religious communities, and other kinds of ecclesiastical institution, an age of improvement in standards of worship, of spiritual and catechetical teaching, an age of large and active congregations, of devoted service by the laity from the highest to the lowest in the social scale. It was a half-century of great achievement, but also of great promise, and this in spite of the fact that it was also a time in which the Church was attacked on all sides, for it was the time when Darwin's work was having its effect, the time of Huxley, the time of the first big scientific and philosophical attack on the bases of religious faith. And if that was not enough it was also a time when strife among Christians was bitter and sharp. The Free Churches were calling for Disestablishment, the newly erected Roman Catholic hierarchy was rejoicing in the strengthening of its position by the proclamation of the dogma of papal infallibility and then by the condemnation of Anglican Orders. The moral of all this is uncertain, but at least there are indications that the Church thrives upon opposition and that we ought not to be distressed by the criticism of the present day. There are many signs that the life of the Church is being renewed now as it was a century ago, but Crockford may be allowed to point the contrast between the intellectual and spiritual training received by the clergy in the nineteenth century and the harassed cramming for G.O.E. which has to pass as training for many of them today.

Another diagram which has caught our attention is that called Degrees of Church of England Membership 1958. It is to be expected that in the case of any National Church the proportion of baptisms to population will be high and that the proportion of practising to baptized members will be low, and this constitutes a big problem for Church government which the Church Assembly has several times discussed in connexion with the revision of the Rules for the Representation of the Laity. The disparity between the numbers of baptized and the numbers of practising churchmen is certainly a matter for concern, but what is much more disturbing is the disparity between the number of confirmed members and the number of Easter communicants. Apparently 23 per cent. only of confirmed members communicated at Easter 1958, and 19 per cent. at Christmas. Over the last twenty years there has been endless discussion about baptism and confirmation, and several reports have been produced, but we have seen nothing that goes to the heart of this problem, which is concerned with methods of preparation for confirmation and the following-up of confirmation. Without some drastic change in these respects all the theological and liturgical discussions are quite useless. We believe that the first question is the ability of the clergy to teach and their knowledge of what to teach, which, of course, takes us back to the point made at the end of the previous paragraph. There is, indeed, if we may trust the reports that come to us from the Universities, some evidence that the parochial clergy are doing better in this respect than the public school chaplains, for it seems to be the case that the public schools, by and large, are not producing boys who keep to the faith once they have left school. Religion is with many of them too much a matter of the large, hearty school congregation and too little a matter of personal commitment. In the parish the emphasis needs to be somewhat reversed. Personal commitment is vital, but the assistance of the family and of the congregation are also vital if the young communicants are to continue as practising members of the Church.

We offer these reflections as evidence that our attitude to the Central Board of Finance and its Statistical Unit is not wholly negative. We might describe it better as one of cautious reserve tinged with suspicion. We may add our regret that amidst all the figures for church workers male and female, organists, choirmasters, servers, and so forth, that humble but very necessary and usually devoted servant of the Church, the verger, appears, so far as we can see, only in the glossary.

Parsonage houses

We note that the tables called 'Marital Status of the Parochial Clergy' and 'Children of the Parochial Clergy' do not make it possible to discover how many of the parochial clergy have children or what is the average size of a clerical family. Such information is important in relation to the recurrent problem of parsonage houses. One cannot drive very far into the country without coming across some attractive eighteenth- or early nineteenth-century house called 'The Old Rectory' or 'The Old Vicarage', and when one asks where 'The New Rectory' or 'The New Vicarage' is one is often directed to a mean little modern villa where the vicar's study is a large cupboard, where there is no living room big enough to hold any kind of parish meeting, and where the bedroom accommodation has been arranged to suit a middle-aged or elderly couple whose children have grown up and left home and are now only occasional visitors. We are constantly hearing complaints from patrons and from parishioners about the policy of some diocesan dilapidations boards in these matters. The desire to be relieved of the responsibility for large houses seems to be stronger than the sense of the importance of providing a residence which is equal to the needs of the parish. In many cases it is obvious that division of the existing parsonage house would be a cheaper and a happier solution to the problem than the purchase or building of a new house. We have been told that the Church Commissioners are opposed to the division and letting of parts of overlarge parsonages. We hope that this is not so, as it would seem to us a mistaken policy and one that is not calculated to improve the housing of the clergy.

Dr. A. E. J. Rawlinson

Among those whose names death has removed from the ranks of the clergy, five seem to us to require special mention. The Right Reverend A. E. J. Rawlinson was one of that group of scholars whose most characteristic production was perhaps the volume entitled Essays Catholic and Critical. Of the fourteen contributors to that volume three alone now survive, Dr. E. O. James, the Dean of York, and Sir Will Spens. Dr. Rawlinson left the academic field earlier than most of the other writers, but both as Archdeacon of Auckland and later as Bishop of Derby he maintained close contact with the development of theological thought. In his last years he devoted himself especially to the question of reunion, in which field he often seemed to express the mind of A. C. Headlam, albeit with a softer tongue. His contributions to the debates of the Church Assembly and the Convocations were of a high order, beautifully phrased and delivered, and always received with attention.

Dr. H. A. Wilson

The Right Reverend H. A. Wilson was a bishop of a different kind, in churchmanship, in academic attainment, and in the course of his ministry. He described himself as a back-bench bishop, a somewhat curious application of a political metaphor to the ecclesiastical scene, but he was one of those back-benchers who attract particular attention from the Press. The principles upon which public personages are selected by journalists as those who should be invited to comment upon the news of the day form a mystery which we have not penetrated, but during the twenty-one years of his episcopate Dr. Wilson must have been one of the most quoted of bishops, his lightest utterance being thought worthy of report. Some of this must be attributed to his originality and independence of mind. He became a bishop in days when plain speaking on the bench was more usual than it is now, and his outspokenness was backed by a wealth of pastoral experience.

Dr. C. M. Chavasse

The Right Reverend Christopher Maude Chavasse was of the Evangelical school to which Dr. Wilson belonged and an equally forthright speaker. He made himself greatly loved by many of the people of the Rochester diocese, as was shown by their tributes to him on his retirement. He would perhaps have been happier and of greater influence in an earlier age.

Dr. Norman Sykes

It seems a very little while since we welcomed the appointment of Dr. Norman Sykes as Dean of Winchester, and now we must record his death. Although his life had some disappointments and he never attained the one position on which he had really set his heart, he could nevertheless look back upon a record of achievement superior to that of most ecclesiastical academics. It is not given to many scholars to restore to life a dead period of history, but this is precisely what Sykes did for the period between 1690 and 1750. He accomplished it particularly in two books, his biography of Edmund Gibson and his Birkbeck Lectures published in 1934. His monumental biography of William Wake, which appeared shortly before his move to Winchester, crowned the achievement. But in addition to his scholarly production Sykes was a gifted teacher and lecturer. He had the down-to-earth doggedness of the Yorkshireman to the full and in debate he would usually rely on a vast knowledge of detail to overbear his opponents, and as a rule they were overborne rather than convinced. But he also had a sense of humour and a wonderful capacity for finding the apt quotation which gave life to what he had to say. That Sykes was of high standing as an historian is unquestionable, but his original contribution to historical work was, as we have indicated, made in a narrow field, and outside that field he did not speak with the same authority. He was a man of remarkable and lovable personality. It was his misfortune to be regarded by some as if he were infallible.

Dr. Peter Green

We have also to record the death of another very remarkable priest, Canon Peter Green, whose whole ministry, save for seven years at the beginning, was spent in Manchester and Salford. Green was a priest of first-class intellect who chose to devote himself to the work of a parish priest. Out of this came a number of contributions to the poorly cultivated field of moral and pastoral theology. He refused at least one English bishopric (as his entry in Who's Who used to state). Had he not done so we might now be recording the death of a mid-twentieth-century Edward King. As it is we mourn one who stands in the very highest tradition of the English parish priest.

The Cathedrals Report

At the time of writing a new Cathedrals Measure is passing through the Church Assembly in consequence of a Commission presided over by the Bishop of Leicester. In general the recommendations of that Commission are in the right direction although they fall very far short of doing justice to the cathedrals. The Dean of Worcester has shown, both in his speech in the Church Assembly, and in an article in The Times, how backward the Church Commissioners have been in honouring the pledges given at the time when the landed endowments of the cathedrals were taken away from them. What is now proposed by the Bishop of Leicester's Commission will go some way towards redressing the past, and it seems as though at last the financial problems of running a cathedral are beginning to be understood. In the course of his reply to the Church Assembly debate on the Report the Bishop of Leicester used what seems to us an unfortunate phrase, when, in defending the suggestion that the title 'dean' should be universally used for the head of the chapter he referred to that officer as 'the priest in charge of the Cathedral church'. This slip of the tongue betrays a weakness in the Cathedrals Commission itself, namely its lack of contact with cathedrals of the old foundation in which the collegiate system of cathedral chapters is seen at its best. The Church of England has suffered and suffers both at the parish and the diocesan level from a monarchical system, which encourages a man to think of his parish or his diocese as 'his show', and sometimes to run it in a highly individual and personal way. The clergy of the Church of England, especially in these days of understaffed parishes and short curacies, receive far too little experience of working as members of a team. The capitular organization of the cathedrals of the old foundation maintains in principle, if not always in practice, the idea of partnership, and it is this idea that should be extended to parish and diocese rather than that the cathedral chapters should be subjected to their deans as if the latter were 'priest in charge of the Cathedral church'. We are sorry to see that in some quarters the publication of the Cathedrals Report has been made the occasion for an attack on the collegiate system. It is obvious that our cathedrals are not wholly inspired by that spirit of utilitarianism which rushes through some departments of church life today, but they bear witness to the importance of liturgical worship in the Christian life, and they have in the past been, and could again be, if the recommendations of the Commission are carried out, valuable centres of sacred learning in each diocese. The cathedral church has a responsibility to the diocese as a whole which is not altogether compatible with being just a rather large parish church.

The Provinces of East Africa, and Uganda and Ruanda-Urundi

Once again we have to record the formation of new provinces in the Anglican Communion. On 3 August 1960 the Province of East Africa was inaugurated by the Archbishop of Canterbury. It comprises the dioceses of Mombasa, Zanzibar, Masasi, Central Tanganyika, and South-West Tanganyika, and therefore unites in one province two very different missionary traditions, those of the Church Missionary Society and of the Universities' Mission to Central Africa. There is more than a slight tendency for overseas provinces to be mainly or wholly of one or other of the various traditions in Anglicanism, and it is commendable that dioceses of very varied outlook should have agreed to combine in this new province. On 16 April 1961 the Archbishop of Canterbury inaugurated the new Province of Uganda and Ruanda-Urundi, which consists of eight dioceses formed out of the two older dioceses of Uganda and the Upper Nile. This means that Lord Fisher, during his tenure of the See of Canterbury, has been concerned in the formation of four new African Provinces, and the quasi-Province of Jerusalem which also includes part of Africa.

A bishop deported

In South Africa the position of the Church is less happy. In April 1960 the Bishop of Johannesburg, Dr. R. A. Reeves, suddenly fled to Swaziland in order to escape arrest. After a visit to Britain he returned by air to South Africa, but was immediately detained and within a few hours deported from the country. As there is no prospect of his being allowed to return he has felt obliged to resign his see. Whatever may be thought of the wisdom of some of Dr. Reeves's actions, there is no doubt that his firm opposition to the policy of apartheid is the cause of his expulsion, and there has been general condemnation of the South African Government for taking this action. It is to be regretted that the advisers to the Crown have not at the time of writing seen fit to provide Dr. Reeves with some suitable office in this country.

'The Church of England in South Africa'

A correspondent has written to ask whether we include in Crockford the names of men who are ordained in the 'Church of England in South Africa'. Bishop Morris, to whom we had occasion to refer in 1956, continued for some time to be shown in Crockford as a bishop in virtue of his consecration to the See of North Africa, and any others of the clergy serving in the 'Church of England in South Africa' who were ordained by a bishop of the Anglican Communion were also included by us, and described as 'in C. of E. in S. Afr.' without further details of current appointments. The Rev. S. C. Bradley, who had been consecrated to the episcopate by Bishop Morris, was shown simply as a priest ordained in the diocese of Sydney. Information on ordinations was not sought from Bishop Morris, as it is from other overseas bishops, but such information has from time to time been sent to Crockford and the names of some men ordained by Bishop Morris may have been inserted in previous issues of the Directory. It is believed that none appear in the present edition and it is our intention to omit these men from Crockford in future so long as they remain in the 'Church of England in South Africa'.

We have been interested to see that the name of Bishop Morris is included in the second edition of H. R. T. Brandreth's Episcopi Vagantes and the Anglican Church, where the author writes: 'George Frederick Bingley Morris, formerly Anglican Bishop in North Africa, must now be reckoned an episcopus vagans. On resigning his see he put himself at the head of the "Church of England in South Africa", which consists of a few extremely Low Church congregations in the Province of South Africa which are a survival of the Colenso schism.' Brandreth makes no mention of Bishop Bradley. The new edition of this book will be useful to a small circle of persons who have to deal with the claims of episcopi vagantes; it will provide entertainment for a wider audience. We recommend a study of it to those who concern themselves with the psychology and sociology of religion.

Guildford Cathedral

In 1934 we recorded that plans for the building of a cathedral at Guildford had been prepared, and in 1937, that the foundation stone had been laid. We must now add that on 17 May 1961 this cathedral was consecrated. The first Dean of Guildford faces an important and difficult work. He and his colleagues on the Chapter have the opportunity to find out whether, free from tradition and ancient custom, there is any better way of using a great cathedral church than that which has been demonstrated so successfully in the great medieval foundations which serve our older dioceses, and less successfully by the parish-church cathedrals of the more modern sees.

New parish churches

The building of new parish churches proceeds apace, and there is evidence that modern ideas of liturgy and of architecture are leading to the erection of buildings which are very different from the traditional English patterns. This is all to the good. An experiment of particular interest is being made at Greenhill in Kent, where the new church is a joint Anglican and Methodist foundation. There has inevitably been controversy about it, and the experiment will be closely watched. We wish it every success, for the restoration of unity between the Church of England and the followers of John Wesley is long overdue, and, if the Methodists had remained faithful to their early practice of frequenting the parish church for the sacraments, would have come about long before now.

Conclusion

The New Year came in with snow and ice, the spring has been bleak, and none can say whether 1962 will end in peace or war. In both the secular and the ecclesiasticalt spheres of life the problem of unity presses hard but seems wellnigh impossible to achieve. But the Christian message is nothing if not a message of hope, though of hope that must accept the discipline of patience. Crockford itself can be no more sure of survival than other human institutions, and lest these should be our last words let us repeat what we have said more than once before, that our criticisms of individuals and institutions in the Church do not imply any want of love for our mater Ecclesia Anglicana, or any lack of belief that she is, as much as any Christian body, a true part of God's New Israel, and one of whose history we can speak with thankful pride, and to whose future we look forward with constant hope.

ECCLESIASTICAL INSURANCE OFFICE

THE 'E.I.O.' WAS FOUNDED in 1887 to conserve for the Church the surplus profits arising from its insurances. In its Life Assurance Department all profits are reserved for policy-holders. Of the yearly grants to Church objects (from profits on all other classes of business) part goes to the Church of England Pensions Board, and part to the Church in Wales; the balance is then divided among the English Dioceses according to the amount of business received from each.
